

Undeniable evidence that the Bible is supernaturally changing

The scientific discipline of probabilities

How is it possible that virtually every person in the entire world that knows their Bible, without exception, will misremember most or all of the following ten (10) passages in the exact same way. They will remember many more the same way, but I only need five (5) to prove my point.

What's causing everyone to misremember the exact same wrong answer? The forest does not fall down without a great wind. So, what's the cause of this impossible unity of misremembering.

The scientific discipline of probabilities dictates that the chances of five people misremembering these five bible quiz questions the same way by chance is 10^{25}

- That's 1 in 1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000

Unless you can provide a rational explanation for this repeatable empirical evidence, all of the following arguments are set aside.

- The Bible can't change because God preserves His word
- The devil isn't that powerful
- You're misremembering
- The human memory is unreliable
- You're confused by all the different versions
- You're confused because you're biblically illiterate
- You're confused by misquotes from pop culture
- You're confused by modernization
- You're confused by misprints
- You're confused by implanted thoughts (Planter's peanut guy vs monopoly guy)
- You're delusional
- You're a charlatan or deceiver (In it for the money)
- You're deceived by a government psyop
- You're deceived by photoshopped tricks on the internet

The first two are KJV only so were not confused by versions. They would only exist in the KJV and they're not in the KJV or any other translation. They don't exist in any translation anywhere in any century. So if you can't find them in any Bible, then how did they get into everyone's mind the same way. The next eight (8) passages are in every version which means this can't be caused by the idea that everyone is just mixed up by different renderings in different versions. There is no version that reflects what everyone remembers.

Another important thing to note is if everyone was simply confused by misquotes from pop culture or different versions or variants, we wouldn't be misremembering the same way.

You only need someone to misremember five (5) of these the same way everyone else will to show that there has to be a cause. I will give you 10. As long as you get at least (five) 5 wrong the same way everyone else does, then it has been proven that something unexplainable is happening.
